

User Scenario – Newsletter Archive

Angela met a nice woman at her block's annual bulb planting party, who told her about an upcoming evening talk with representatives from Bloomingdale Aging in Place, a service that helps senior citizens live safely at their home by engaging community support. The woman told her that the block association newsletter has been covering it for the past several issues. That evening, while reading the newsletter, Angela recalled how her neighbor recently made the difficult decision to move her mother to assisted living. She never thought much about the aging in place program, but with the trouble she had after her knee surgery last year, she realized that she might need help at some point. She never saves the newsletter and thought it would be nice to be able to look up older issues to read more about Bloomingdale Aging in Place before the event.