

Angela Berman

Age: 74

Occupation: Retired

Status: Married

Location: Manhattan, NY

Angela lives on the Upper West Side in Manhattan. Both she and her husband are in their 70s and are retired, but continue to be quite active. She runs daily and goes to Pilates three times a week. She loves to cook, and often helps out with her grandchildren who live a few blocks away.

She and her husband are very involved in their co-op board. She is particularly concerned about security on her block, which is why she supports her local block association. Since her daughter moved nearby, she has been worrying about her grandchildren going out on their own, now that they are entering their teens. She feels a nighttime block guard keeps her family safe.

Angela loves living on the Upper West Side. She raised her family there and couldn't imagine living in a different neighborhood, which is why she plans to stay as long as she can. She enjoys going to museums and Lincoln Center with her friends and is grateful for the intellectual stimulation of the lectures and book club organized by her block association.

"I like that the block association supports Bloomingdale Aging in Place. We don't need it – yet—but I'm glad to know it will be there when we do."
